Note: Programme is subject to change and will be updated continuously up to the Conference.

Special Presentation: Perspectives on Social Cohesion (Day 1)

Setting the stage for ICCS 2022 plenaries and breakouts, the Special Presentation will address how differences in culture, beliefs and value systems, alongside the many identities we have as individuals and groups, impact social cohesion. Perspectives from Southeast Asia and globally will be aired in the discussion.

1st Plenary: How Faith Can Bridge Divides (Day 1)

This plenary seeks to critically examine the reasons for the rise and endurance of social polarisation due to ideological or religious beliefs. With a stronger understanding of these divides and the reasons behind them, we hope that some of the lessons gleaned can be applied to foster inter-religious peace and harmony in plural societies both across the region and well beyond. Specific lessons from faith traditions will be shared.

2nd Plenary: How Diversity Can Be Harnessed for the Common Good (Day 2)

This plenary will seek to address the tools and concepts to understand a world marked by super-diversity, that is the existence of highly complex and heterogeneous societies. It will raise questions about how to talk about identities and with people of different and overlapping identities, as well as to appreciate the complex but important role the intersectionality of identities plays in forging social cohesion. It will discuss the way that our belonging and identity overlap across issues such as gender, class, race, nationality, religious and worldview, both as individuals and as groups.

Only by understanding complex interconnections and interdependencies between individuals and social systems can we increase our social capital and create opportunities for individuals in society to form deep bonds across differences, towards a common good.

3rd Plenary: How Technology Can Be Leveraged to Foster Mutual Trust (Day 2)

This plenary will ask, given that we know digital platforms can create echo chambers and be used for divisive ends, how can we employ them to promote social cohesion? People's identities are part of this, including their religious identities, but practical examples of how cohesion is built online and with technologies such as social media is central to this plenary. Looking from different global angles and focusing on areas such as community-building, preventing and countering violent extremism, and mapping global peacebuilding, this session will seek to show how online platforms may be beacons of cohesion and hope, rather than division and hatred.

Breakout Session 1 (Day 2)*Delegates will choose one to attendFaith 1: Religion, Resilience & Cohesion (International Perspective)

This breakout session has an interest in different faith-based strategies in building resilience against divisive, even extremist, religious narratives within communities, and how religious leaders and communities can build wider resilience beyond their tradition across societies. It will focus on international contexts. Examples of good practice and ways of speaking into such situations may be discussed.

Identity 1: Languages, Identity & Belonging

This breakout group examines how languages shape our perceptions of self and other, and our understanding of identities. Identity and language are key in building one's sense of belonging, especially for minority groups. This breakout group can explore how the limits in languages, the evolution of vocabulary, and use of colloquialism affect the way we see ourselves and build our sense of belonging and how we differentiate ourselves from others. Attention will be given to the lived experience of communities and minority language groups.

Cohesion 1: Hate & Conspiracy Online

This breakout session further investigates issues raised during Plenary 3 around hate, prejudice, and conspiracy online. A key focus would be on conspiracy theories. It will address practical and real world solutions and practices in this regard.

Breakout Session 2 (Day 3)*Delegates will choose one to attendFaith 2: Religion, Resilience & Cohesion (Regional Perspective)

This breakout session has an interest in different faith-based strategies in building resilience against divisive, even extremist, religious narratives within communities, and how religious leaders and communities can build wider resilience beyond their tradition across societies. It will focus on regional (Southeast Asian) contexts. Examples of good practice and ways of speaking into such situations may be discussed.

Identity 2: Diversity & Intersections (Public Policy & Common Space)

This breakout session discusses public policies across the world that have helped identify and safeguard vulnerable individuals and communities from radicalisation, and how common spaces have been found to build resilience against divisive, extremist and religious narratives in communities.

Cohesion 2: Connectivity & Connectedness

This breakout session examines good practices and case studies about people who have used online platforms to build connections between different groups of people and strengthen social cohesion. The session will also be used to understand what social media companies have been doing to promote social cohesion.

Breakout Session 3 (Day 3)*Delegates will choose one to attendFaith 3: Faith Overcoming COVID-19 Pandemic

This breakout session explores how traditions have evolved over this challenging global Covid-19 pandemic in relation to practice rituals and ways to worship. In particular, the session discusses how communities have built internal connections within themselves despite being unable to meet physically, but also how they have utilised technology to reach out beyond their own communities.

Identity 3: Religion & Social Justice

This breakout session discusses some of the ways that religious identities inform social justice work, which in turn helps to deepen connections across various groups in society and promoting socially cohesive bonds. Areas explored may include overcoming racial and ethnic prejudice, protecting vulnerable individuals and communities beset by a lack of environmental justice, and countering radical and extremist narratives. It will seek to demonstrate examples of good practice and provide practical steps for working towards social justice from within various religious worldviews and identities.

Cohesion 3: Youth Work Initiatives

This breakout session looks explicitly at the work of youth leaders in social cohesion across Asia. The way that specific approaches to connect with young people and bridge potentially divisive partitions between communities will be of particular interest. It will stress the practice of building effective youth dialogue and service movements, rather than the theories involved in reaching younger people.

Community Showcase & Collaboration Whitespace (Day 1)

A session to encourage youth civic activism and collaboration through facilitated gameplay and an interactive showcase of ground-up initiatives by young community leaders.

Fireside Chat – Social Media for Social Cohesion (Day 2)
